We are a new book design and publishing studio based in USA. We have very good experience, and knowledge about publishing books, especially academic books. As New York Science Publishing, welcomes new authors and suggestions for books.

New York Science Publishing is an international publishing house.

The types of publications we seek for include:

Our authors are drawn from universities, research institutes and professional advisors all over the world. We are actively expanding our program with international scope and appeal titles.

If you are planning to write, the first step is to prepare a publishing proposal that outlines your ideas. We do not need a finished manuscript to evaluate your proposal. At the beginning of the writing period you receive your proposal, and your manuscript texts give you better guidance to meet the needs of your readers. We think such manuscript development as an integral part of the publishing process.

All books to be published are assigned the American ISBN number. The characteristics of the type and format of the metadata are established by the International ISBN Agency in cooperation with the national ISBN agencies.

New York Science Publishing has been searched in international indexes as of 2025. Discussions have been held with international indexes such as Crosref and Clarivate, and our publishing house has been accepted by these indexes. Each book has been taken an American ISBN number and an American DOI number.
